2 HURT IN ST. PAUL WRECK AT EDGEMONT

100-MILE GRIND ENDS TRAGICALLY, KILLING BOY, 14

ROBERT GILLESPIE, BE-LOIT, STRUCK IN CROSS-ING TRACK.

4 OTHERS HURT

Racing Car Blows Tire and Overturns, Badly Injuring Otto Wobig, Driver.

In plain view of the terror dazed eyes of thousands in the grandstand, a 14-year old lad was flung to death at the automobile races at the fair grounds here Saturday afternoon.

He was Robert Gillespie, 609 Portland avenue, Beloit.

J. B. Matten, Milwaukee, pilot of the fatal car, equipped with a broken nose.

The machine was the same one that killed a driver in races at Milwaukee earlier in the summer.

Dust Obscured Accident.

A pall of dust raised by the racers was the probable cause of the accident. It made impossible a clear view of the details, causing conflicting stories.

The 55th mile was up and there were but two miles to go when the child, accompanied by Clark Ackerly, 721 Portland avenue, Beloit, dashed across the track, according to spectators. The car was bearing down the home stretch at better than 60 miles an hour. He saw the youngster and turned to the right.

Car Skids 100 Feet.

The Gillespie family in his tracks and the driver jammed down his emergency brake.

Brakes slewed the rear end of the machine around to the left and in a great cloud of dust it hurtled itself broadside for 100 feet.

With the Gillespie boy being dragged and turned over, the motor did not stop in its wild skid until it crashed with spent force into the grandstand.

Boy Badly Crushed.

When the speed contraption pounded into the stairs of the raised platform, it tipped partly on its side and the youngster's body on the emergency brake lever.

Gillespie was dead when the car was lifted off his body. One leg was cut off at the hip and the other arms were flattened and the body crushed. A deep gash was cut in the right side of his face. It took two men to lift the body off the brake handle.

Earl Gillespie, the boy's father, told Coroner Whaley Saturday. He does not care to pursue any prosecution. He said the boy had no right to be on the track and should not have been at the races.

Immediately after the crash the crowd had swarmed on the track from both sides and the police cleared the speedway barely in time for the three drivers who still were in the race.

Some reports were that the lad who was killed was not the one who crossed the track, but had been (Continued on page 2)

ALBERTA FOLK GREET PRINCE, NEW RANCHER

High River, Alberta—Cowboys, ranchers and townspeople of the High River district crowded the Prince of Wales to a royal welcome when his special train arrived late last night.

For the first time since his arrival in Canada the prince walked from the station to the main street, accompanied by either secret service men or police. As the prince reached the street, David Bear's Paw and Red Cloud, famous Indian chiefs of the Stoney Indians from the Morley reservation, were waiting. When the prince drew abreast of them Bear, a Pawnee, said: "Greetings, Chief Morning Star—your brothers of the Stoney salute you."

The prince, who was non-pleased for a moment for the correct way to return the greetings, hesitated, then gravely proffered his hand, said: "Morning Star is proud to greet his brothers."

The prince then proceeded to his ranch by automobile.

MERCHANT IS DEAD.

Milwaukee—William J. Diederich, 65, president of the Diederich-Schneider Hardware Co., died Sunday.

COOLIDGE ACTIVE CANDIDATE FOR 1924 NOMINATION

POLITICAL SITUATION IS DISCUSSED WITH SUPPORTERS.

DOUBT DISPELLED

Caution Displayed on World Court Issue; May Leave it to Senate.

Washington—President Coolidge in an active candidate for the nomination to succeed himself. While reasons of strategy or official delicacy may make a formal announcement unwise for a new candidate to come, leading Republicans in all parts of the country are no longer in doubt about it.

In fact, the president himself has discussed the political situation with so many callers that they have not had to be told his attitude for the republican party is a natural interest in the man who is to be its standard-bearer in the next campaign.

WATERTOWN FAIR OPENS ON THE 18

Inter-County Exhibit to Attract Many—Children's Day on Thursday.

One of the last fairs in southern Wisconsin will be the Watertown fair, opening on Sept. 18 to 20. Tuesday, the opening day, will be Children's day.

Fireworks will feature the fair program for Wednesday and Thursday nights. A fast schedule of races is expected and an all-around good fair.

More interest is being taken in Watertown this year than at previous exhibits in the agricultural exhibits, some of the best stock in the district being entered. A good program will feature the opening day.

PUT FROSTED CORN IN SILOS AS FAST AS IS POSSIBLE

Farmers in the state are busy saving their frosted corn crop. Recent heavy frosts have made it imperative to speed the ensiling of the crop. Reports from all sections of the state indicate that practically all of Wisconsin's 26,000 silos will shortly be full.

In speaking of the best manner to deal with frosted corn, F. B. Morrison of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, is advising many inquiries that satisfactory silage can be secured from frosted corn.

"The crop should be ensiled as quickly as possible," he says, "and the silage usually made from the heads of a frost will wash out much of the nutriment from the frosted grain."

er, as for instance, whether he has any preference concerning the location of the convention itself. It has been told of the warring factions in certain states and has been advised that he could help bring harmony by the nomination of a little influence from the direction of the White House.

Local Conditions.

But these are questions are related to the problem of state control of the republican organization and the friends of Mr. Coolidge's boom, which, of course, to line up the local politicians so that the delegates ultimately chosen will be instructed to cast their ballots for the present incumbent. This is the season of political maneuvering and the means to a presidential candidate than the convention itself.

The president has done one thing which his advisers think is a shrewd piece of political strategy. He has declined to upset the Harding appointments. He needs their support and acquiescence. They may be changed, in time, they will be changed, if Mr. Coolidge is elected next year, but the status quo will be maintained until it is apparent that Mr. Coolidge has a free hand.

Harvey in the Case.

Take, for instance, the return of Ambassador Harvey to the Court of St. James. The former editor of the Weekly was ready to come back home and take up the pen of political satire once more.

There were rumors that he might be persuaded to do so in behalf of Hiram Johnson, but Mr. Harvey has returned to his post where he can not very well participate either for or against Mr. Coolidge and the situation remains uncomplicated.

Caution on World Court.

As for the World Court itself, that issue probably will be best left to Mr. Coolidge's political caution. He has had many an opportunity to disclose his views on it. He made the speech at the time of the Harding cabinet, made any speeches of length about the World Court since Mr. Coolidge assumed the duties of the presidency. They are not themselves informed of his wishes and they maintain, therefore, a discreet silence.

The president has two courses open to him in handling the snarl that has arisen in the republican party over the World Court. He can do as Mr. Harding did and champion the market of the opposition, or he can do as Mr. Harding did and champion the market of the opposition, or he can do as Mr. Harding did and champion the market of the opposition.

By announcing that there is nothing for the chief executive to do but to await the action of the Senate, Mr. Coolidge can keep himself out of the controversy. As for the Senate there is a two-third vote in that body which can adopt the World Court proposal but it means a coalition of democrats and republicans. The opposition of nearly half the republicans in the senate would be inevitable and the only question for the party leaders to decide is whether they want to risk open warfare in the party itself or shelve the whole question until after the 1924 presidential campaign. They do not, however, have freedom of decision on that point as the democrats would not let the World Court proposal slip in the Foraker Relations Committee without speeches and directing the attention of the pro-Court wing of the republican party to the neglect of the vital policy of the Harding administration.

It seems certain that Mr. Coolidge will leave the matter entirely to the republican leaders of the Senate and will not get into the matter if he can possibly help it. Mr. Coolidge isn't seeking political trouble. He wants to keep the waters calm so that he can enter the convention with the maximum of opposition and the maximum of support.

100 WAYS To Make Money

by DILLY WINNER.

If I Could Make Waste-baskets—

MOST wastebaskets are anything but decorative; that is why really artistic baskets are always saleable. Baskets to match the color scheme of a room are now in vogue, and any one who is clever with paint and brush has at hand a source of extra money.

If I could make wastebaskets; that is, weave the reed or paint them attractively, I could dispose of my output in a short time—provided I advertised.

The logical way to advertise would be with a Janesville Gazette Want Ad. I would call 2500 and start my Want Ad scouting around for me at once.

We Can Get Along Without Them.

We can get along without automobile races on the track of the fair grounds which is in no way suited for such dangerous sport. Even on the best and largest tracks built especially for automobile racing there are accidents. To hold such an affair without death or maiming of one or more of the racers would be considered a miracle. One driver injured and a youth killed is too big a price to pay for auto racing. It ought to be cut out and finished right where it is now—no more.

Monday is Undertaker's Day in the auto operation.

Reaping the Whirlwind.

Governor Walton is reaping the whirlwind of his own demagoguery. A few days ago the Gazette called attention to the large number of pardons he had granted to thieves and murderers, election fraud convicts, and other persons in his state who had violated the statutes and been convicted. He named to office men and women who were unfit for the jobs, blatantly called attention to his own revision of the principles of life and his flouting of old conventions and fixed rules of faith. It was a fertile field he prepared for the Ku Klux Klan and general lawlessness. Organized masked bands. In some cases Ku Klux, in others not, have inaugurated a reign of terror in the state, whipped men and women to death or to the verge of insanity, and within the governor's own state built up that "Invisible Empire" which finds its counterpart in the story of the terrorism of the south during the two years following the civil war. There is no room in the United States for any organization which has for its plans and purposes the government of the people outside of what is regularly declared by constitutions, laws and ordinances.

No sooner does a man recover from the vacation expenses than Christmas comes along.

The American Constitution.

One hundred and thirty-four years ago the constitution of the United States was signed. It was later ratified and became the basic law of the new nation built on the western hemisphere. It came into being with great travail. Scarcely any of the designers were in agreement on all the provisions set forth. They went before the people with fear and trembling. Many of the greatest men who had figured in the revolution opposed the constitution with a bitterness which has since found no equal in political battles—not even the rancor of slavery and abolition was ever so fierce. There was no precedent for such a constitution. It was patterned after nothing then existing or which had existed in all the ages of history. The American constitution pioneered, a new path, blazed a new trail and set up the rights of mankind as had no other document, not even magna charta. It was the finality of the declaration of independence reduced to administrative terms. Under this constitution, pronounced by William Pitt the greatest human document ever written, we have gone forward as a nation to the glorious position we occupy in the world's affairs. It is the foundation of solid rock. The danger is in the dynamiting of the rock, the chipping away of the underpinning and the addition of temporary remedies for the fatal truths which are there set up in practice and for our guidance.

DATA ON INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS

By FREDERICK J. HASKIN

Washington.—The government wants more complete and more accurate data on industrial accidents which result in the injury or death of working men and women. To this end the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor is making a study of the problem and has formulated uniform standard tables and classifications. Already fifteen states are compiling their accident statistics in accordance with these standards.

To show how much remains to be done in this line, B. L. Stewart, United States Commissioner of Labor Statistics, called attention to the fact that the total number of industrial fatalities in this country in one year is largely a matter of estimate, ranging from 12,000 to 30,000. The total number of injuries is even more in doubt and no one has any means of knowing the total number of accidents.

"The total annual wage loss resulting from these industrial accidents amounts to at least one billion dollars," says Mr. Stewart. "The injured workmen and their dependents are reimbursed in accident compensation approximately $200,000,000 each year. Thus it will be seen that in spite of the compensation laws the workers must still bear four-fifths of the economic burden resulting from industrial injuries."

Based on incomplete data, the bureau, which Mr. Stewart heads has estimated the total number each year of disabling work accidents under national industrial conditions at approximately 2,427,650. Of these, 21,000 result in death; 1,550 in permanent disability; 105,000 in permanent partial disability, such as the loss of an arm, foot, finger, etc.; 1,495,000 in temporary disability under two weeks; 467,000 in temporary disability from two to four weeks, and $35,000 in temporary disability over four weeks.

These figures prove that accidents take an appalling toll of the workers and show that peace hath its horrors no less than war, to paraphrase a familiar quotation. Every worker killed and every worker incapacitated in any way or degree adds to the economic burden of society in one way or another. From a humanitarian standpoint it is incumbent upon organized society to reduce the suffering and distress resulting from these accidents to the lowest possible minimum, and it is scarcely less important to reduce the economic loss in wages, skill and capacity to work. The first step toward all this is to have complete and accurate information concerning industrial accidents. Hence the government's activity.

According to Mr. Stewart the difficulty in obtaining reliable data showing the number and severity of industrial accidents in the United States is due largely to the incompleteness and incompleteness of the accident statistics published by the various states. In some states the scope of the compensation and accident reporting laws is limited to so-called hazardous employments, excluding mercantile establishments, professional employments and clerical occupations. All of the states except one exclude agriculture and domestic service.

Six states and the District of Columbia have no workmen's compensation and accident reporting laws at all, and consequently no accident statistics are available. "Even in those states which have compensation laws," says Mr. Stewart, "the methods of compiling accident statistics vary so much that in many cases the data published are not comparable and can not be combined with the statistics of other states. Some states use as a unit the number of accidents which occurred during the year, some use the number reported during the year and others use the number of cases closed or adjudicated during the year. Again, some states present the data for the calendar year and others for the fiscal year."

"This lack of uniformity makes an accurate comparison of one state with another absolutely impossible. In only twenty states are accidents classified by industry; in only eighteen states are they classified by cause; in only twelve by nature of injury, and in only about one-half by severity of injury. Only two states have compiled and published accident rates, without which it is impossible to know whether accidents are increasing or decreasing, or to check up the value of accident-prevention work."

All the states have now been requested to furnish their accident data to the Bureau of Labor Statistics annually for compilation.

In three of the basic industries fairly complete figures relative to accidents are now available—mining, transportation and manufacturing. As long as significant data that these are the industries which make their returns to some bureau or other agency of the federal government. As a result of years of patient work, the Bureau of Mines has organized the machinery through which a practically complete system of accident reporting has been established in all kinds of mines, whether coal or metalliferous. The bureau has a field work survey which has enabled it to make practical use of this statistical information to the end that mines may be made safer.

In the transportation industry the railroads report accidents to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Commission has a substantially complete record which is reasonably well classified statistically and which has been very serviceable in the installation of safety devices which have rendered railroad work less hazardous. The third industry, iron and steel, makes its reports to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. As long as 1910 the bureau began the work of developing machinery through which accidents in the iron and steel mills of the country would be reported to it, and it now receives practically complete returns.

The classification, tabulation and presentation of this statistical material periodically is said to have resulted in the introduction by practically all the large steel corporations and companies of safety devices and methods which have led to a startling decrease in the accident ratio in the industry. "That is the great objective, for the usefulness of statistics in accident prevention work consists in this—that they reveal the dangerous spots in an industry and indicate where preventive measures may be applied with the greatest practical results."

"What the bureau now proposes to do," says Mr. Stewart, "is to apply the same methods to the whole industrial situation, to organize the machinery for complete and thorough reports of accidents and to make such field surveys as will put the bureau in touch with the more hazardous industries; in other words, do for the entire field what it has done in the matter of iron and steel."

GOOD TO BE ALIVE
It is good to be alive
When the first green buds arrive.
And the tulips come to blossoms
And the birds return to stir
It is good to be on earth
When the new leaves come to birth,
And the world takes on the wonder
And the magic of the spring.

IT IS GOOD TO BE ALIVE
When the bees are in the hive,
And the skies are blue above us
And the breeze is clover sweet;
It is good to be on earth
For the laughter and the mirth
Of the lazy, drowsy summer
With its shining, golden wheat.

IT IS GOOD TO BE ALIVE
Good to walk and good to drive,
When the Master Painter, Autumn,
Tints the fields and woods and hills;
It is good to stand and see
Colors rich on every tree
And to share in all the beauty
Which so lavishly he spills.

IT IS GOOD TO BE ALIVE
With the birds and good to strive,
And to face the silent winter.
With the snow drifts at your door;
It is good to be on earth
With a fire to light the hearth—
So we live and count the seasons,
Finding charm in all the four.

Who's Who Today

JAMES E. WATSON.
One of those voiceless rumors has it that Senator James E. Watson of Indiana is being "strongly mentioned" by leaders of the republican party as a presidential possibility in 1924.

Before the last convention in 1920, a poll of Indiana showed him to be the favorite son of his native state. But but, the voters of Indiana have never given him any further.

The Hoosier statesman was born at Winchester, Ind., in 1864. He was a boy orator at De Pauw at the time Alvin Karpis was in the penitentiary. He was elected to the Indiana legislature in 1912, and was re-elected in 1914, 1916, 1918, 1920, 1922 and 1924. He was elected to the Indiana legislature in 1920, and was re-elected in 1922, 1924, 1926, 1928, 1930, 1932, 1934, 1936, 1938, 1940, 1942, 1944, 1946, 1948, 1950, 1952, 1954, 1956, 1958, 1960, 1962,
